Tasmania's Forest Carbon: A Documentary

This exciting new documentary outlines how Tasmania's forests are our biggest opportunity for climate action. Produced by The Tree Projects and based on their ground-breaking Forest Carbon Report from last year, it shows that native forest logging in Tasmania is the highest emitting sector in the state. It explains the importance of forests to the carbon cycle, where the emissions are coming from, and what can be done to prevent this from happening. (25mins)

Q&A with Dr Jen Sanger, author of the Forest Carbon Report

Torres Strait: Swallowed by the Sea

The First Nations peoples of the Torres Strait Islands are in the frontline of the climate emergency as their homes are threatened by rising sea levels. See this very moving documentary of their fight for justice. An Aljazeera film by Theopi Scarlatos. (25mins)
